Short Bio
Nicholas Kalavrezos is a Senior Head and Neck Reconstructive Surgeon in the Head and Neck Centre at University College London Hospitals (UCLH), with a background in Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery. Nicholas is also the Lead Head and Neck Sarcoma Surgeon for the London Sarcoma Service. His clinical practice includes ablative and reconstructive surgery for the head and neck, with a special interest in bone sarcomas and functional outcomes following reconstructive surgery. His clinical practice also includes the surgical treatment of salivary gland tumours as well as thyroid surgery. Nicholas's research interests include applications of "tissue engineering" in head and neck reconstruction. Nicholas is a founding member of the "Centre for Reconstructive Surgery" at University College London. He is also a member of the "Face Transplant Group" based at Royal Free Hospital. He has joint research projects in the Nanotechnology Lab at UCL on "tissue-engineered bio-scaffolding," aiming to reconstruct defects of the head and neck using tissue-engineered microvascular flap reconstruction. The FORTE flap is an example of this approach. Nicholas lectures regularly at national and international meetings and is the President of the European Association for Cranio-Maxillofacial Surgery (EACMFS).
