Dr. Kung specializes in microsurgical reconstruction to address functional and aesthetic challenges following cancer surgery, extremity trauma, and nerve injury. His clinical practice includes autologous breast reconstruction, lymphedema surgery, neuroma surgery, and extremity salvage. Dr. Kung's research was instrumental in the development of the Regenerative Peripheral Nerve Interface (RPNI) to facilitate intuitive prosthetic control, mitigate postamputation pain, and provide sensory feedback after limb loss. Additionally, Dr. Kung serves as the co-founder and Chief Medical Officer of Blue Arbor Technologies, a company that designs and manufactures implantable prosthetic interfaces to control advanced robotic limbs. |                                                                             |                                                                                     |
